If you haven't had a chance to see "Industrial Strength Sleep," the Ed Ruscha show at Fabric Workshop and Museum (the first exhibition in the new space), go this Friday when you can see the man himself. Ruscha will give a lecture at 6 p.m. and FWM will host a reception, free and open to all. Fri., Oct. 3, 6-8 p.m., 1214 Arch St., 215-561-8888 Jacob Lunderby and Tim Tate take inspiration from moving images; and their manipulated film-still landscapes, and intricate world-within-a-world objects called "video reliquaries," respectively, make for a solid show at Pentimenti Gallery. Through Oct. 18, 145 N. Second St., 215-625-9990 Area 919, part of the new Northern Liberties Design Center, is showing 25 years' worth of work from art collective TODT (which showed at Fleisher/Ollman last year), as well as "Element," an exhibit of architectural objects and garden ornaments from around the world.

"TODT: As If" runs through Nov. 8; "Element" runs through Dec. 31;

919 N. Fifth St., 215-627-3311 .
